WHERE TO GO THIS SUMMER

Not a bit too early for you to begin casting about for a place to go this summer. Summer's not so far away.

You'll get the pick of the cottages—the most desirable rooms at the hotel or boarding cottage—if you look about now.

Cape Cod's to be the vogue this summer. You really ought to know about it.

Then there's Buzzard's Bay; there's Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket; there's Narragansett; there's Newport; there's Watch Hill, and there's the beautiful shore line of Connecticut.

No other summering places can offer you greater or more varied attractions.

Hungarian Sick Benefit Societies Plan An Elaborate Program for Sunday

With Mayor Buckingham and other speakers and guests of prominence taking part in imposing ceremonies, the cornerstone of the proposed new home of the Hungarian Sick Benefit societies at Butler avenue and State street will be laid at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Members of the Hungarian consular service, former Congressman R. E. DeForest, Hungarian clergymen and editors will take part in the exercises. A big parade headed by the Coast Artillery Philharmonic band will precede the laying of the big granite block. It is expected that 4,000 will march.

The building will be four stories high, and while a considerable portion will be reserved for the uses of the society, there will be space for apartments, offices, and stores, with a vault for the depositing of the records and valuables of the societies.

The program follows: Selection, "American Hymn," Coast Artillery Philharmonic band.

Opening address by the president of the confederation, Alexander Bakos of Bridgeport.

Hungarian National Hymn, choir of the Hungarian Reformed church on Pine street.

Address in English, Geza D. Berko, editor of the Hungarian Voice, New York.

Music by the band.

Address, Mayor Edward T. Buckingham.

Singing by the choir of the Hungarian Reformed church on Pine street.

Address, Rev. Erno Romjathy, pastor of the Hungarian Reformed church on State street.

Address, Geza Hoffman of New York, attaché of the Hungarian consular office.

Address in English, former Congressman Robert E. DeForest, counsel for the confederation.

Short speeches by the presidents of the different local and out of town Hungarian societies.

Placing different articles in the cornerstone and sealing the box containing them, Frank Shlovensky, secretary of the confederation.

Closing address, Joseph Zsenyithi, vice president of the confederation.

No defense was entered in the suit of Antonio Mastroianni against Frederick Scribner, superintendent of the Royal Equipment Co., heard yesterday before Judge Ralph Wheeler in the Superior court. The defendant was not represented in any way, not even by counsel. The suit grew out of an automobile accident on the evening of Nov. 7 last when the plaintiff was injured by the defendant's machine.

The plaintiff explained to the court that while he was in Main street crossing Arch street, the car of the defendant turned to the left, ran into him and dragged him for a distance of 50 feet. If Mr. Scribner had kept to the right of the road the plaintiff would not have been hit. As a result of the mishap, the plaintiff sustained a broken collar blade and several bruises and lacerations on his head and face, and was confined to his bed for two months. Dr. Arthur Scrimgeour of the Bridgeport hospital staff explained to the court that the injuries to Mastroianni are of a permanent nature.

Attorney Henry Shannon, who represented the plaintiff, was asked by the court to file a statement of further facts as to a permanent injury, and also the law on the matter.

SAY PENNA ROAD HAS ONE-FOURTH OF N. H. STOCK

Director Says it Wishes to be on a Level With the New York Central

That the Pennsylvania railroad has a direct interest in not less than a fourth of the outstanding stock of the New Haven railroad, is the reported statement of an influential man in that company, that the Penna seeks the appointment of two directors to the New Haven's board instead of one and will get the desired representation and that the recent acquisition of New Haven stock was made to put the Pennsylvania on a level as to stock holdings and representation with the New York Central, were some of the allegations thrown on this story by a well informed railroad man today.

One of the directors of the New Haven company is authority for the statement that the Pennsylvania's sole idea in buying up this stock was to put the company on a par with the Central. These two lines cover the New Haven and the business it can throw their way. The fact that it is operated in the same manufacturing section of the country, makes the New Haven's business important to the other lines. The Central and the American express, owned by the Central, with the Mutual Life, have been the three largest holders of New Haven stock. The Central of course dominated the holdings of the Pennsylvania company and therefore now three representatives on the New Haven board. The three Central directors are J. Pierpont Morgan, who in financial circles is said to regard the New Haven Company as his pet project.

The report that T. DeWitt Cuyler, a director of the Pennsylvania, would be one of the two men to represent that company on the New Haven's board, was well received in railroad circles today. Mr. Cuyler is well known in university circles in this city, being a graduate of Yale with the class of 1874, and he scarcely ever missed any of the university athletic events held in this city and the boat race at New London.

Mr. Cuyler would appear for the financial end of the Pennsylvania and it is the belief here that the other man would likely be one of the operating officials and by an officer of the New Haven, who sits close to the throne, the name of Samuel Rea and Charles E. Pough, both vice presidents of the Pennsylvania, were mentioned today.

While the books of the New Haven company show the Pennsylvania to hold only about $6,000,000 of the company's stock, it is generally believed by the railroad people that the Pennsylvania through other channels has a very much larger ownership of New Haven securities. While the Central holds only so many shares in its name, it has a large interest in the American Express shares and in the same way the Penna controls stock to the amount stated through other means.

There are many reasons why the Pennsylvania should seek further insight in the New Haven's affairs. One of the most important of these is that the two lines have a physical connection when the New York connecting railway is completed, but that the Penna now or in the near future will dominate or control the New Haven is ridiculed by President Mellen.

TO ORDAIN FIVE PRIESTS

Ceremony in St. Joseph's Cathedral Next Monday Morning

The Right Rev. Bishop Nylan will on next Monday morning ordain to the priesthood the Rev. Paul Keating, the Rev. Denis Sullivan, the Rev. William Cavanagh, the Rev. Andrew Komara, and the Rev. Caspar Panik. The ceremony will begin at 8:30 o'clock at St. Joseph's Cathedral, Hartford.

PERILS THAT TRAVEL IN PAPER CURRENCY FOUND AT YALE

Prof. Hildrich Finds an Average of 142,000 Bacteria on Soiled Dollar Bills Though Some Have Lost Their Virulence

"Paper money, as an avenue by which disease can be transmitted has been an object of suspicion for some time," says The Medical Record. "Indeed, this particular form of exchange has been shown more or less conclusively to be under favoring conditions an actual menace to the health of the community."

"Hildrich of the Sheffield laboratory of bacteriology and hygiene, Yale university and Park of the Research laboratory of the board of health of New York, have demonstrated that dirty paper money is 'similar to the paper and rags and capable of carrying living tubercle and diphtheria bacilli for some days or longer.'"

"Hildrich, however, does not regard the danger as very great. He obtained twenty-five bills, the very dirty ones he was able to procure, and subjected them to a minute examination, the outcome being that he found the average number of bacteria in each of twenty-one bills to be 142,000. Further, it was established by subsequent experiments that these organisms were not in possession of their full virulence. The publication of these results was not to create a feeling of confidence in the comparative harmlessness of the dirtiest paper money, or, at least, to seem to demonstrate that as sources for spreading infection such was not greatly to be feared."

"In a recent issue of The Popular Science Monthly, Dr. C. Morrisson writes to point out that the menace of paper money must not be wholly judged from the virulence or the nature of the germs discovered. He pertinently draws attention to the fact that the infection of drinking water with the germs of typhoid fever should be estimated on the number of the bacilli typhoid found, for if that were the case water would be seldom condemned, and those bacilli are seldom discovered."

"In brief, Morrisson contends and it appears contends with justice, that it is not so much the question of virulence or the nature of the germs as the number of organisms found on paper money, but that experiments have established that money is a medium of bacterial communication from individual to individual. In order, therefore, to elucidate the matter, paper money known to have been exposed to contamination by highly infectious organisms should be examined by scientific experts. It has been ascertained that money can be infected by handling; it has also been shown that the germs of diphtheria and tuberculosis may live on infected bills for several days. Morrisson says 'It seems but a step, then, to the final demonstration of the actual transmission of these and similar diseases by money in circulation, and to the prevention of such spread of disease by the proper measure to eradicate such a source of infection.'"

"There is little doubt that disease is spread in ways that we know not, even in these times of advanced research. If paper money does spread disease, though but to an extremely small extent this is reason sufficient to insist upon the more rapid withdrawal from circulation of soiled bills and the issuing of new and clean notes."

"The results of more minute and exhaustive investigations into the question of infected paper money as a means of spreading disease should be interesting and valuable."

Sons and Daughters of Old New Hampshire Prepare to Organize

"The New Hampshire Club of Bridgeport" is the name of a new social organization that was successfully started last night at an enthusiastic meeting of natives of New Hampshire held at the home of Dr. C. H. Sprague, 168 West Liberty street, when a tentative organization was formed and a committee was appointed to report a constitution and by-laws at a meeting to be held at the same place Thursday, June 2.

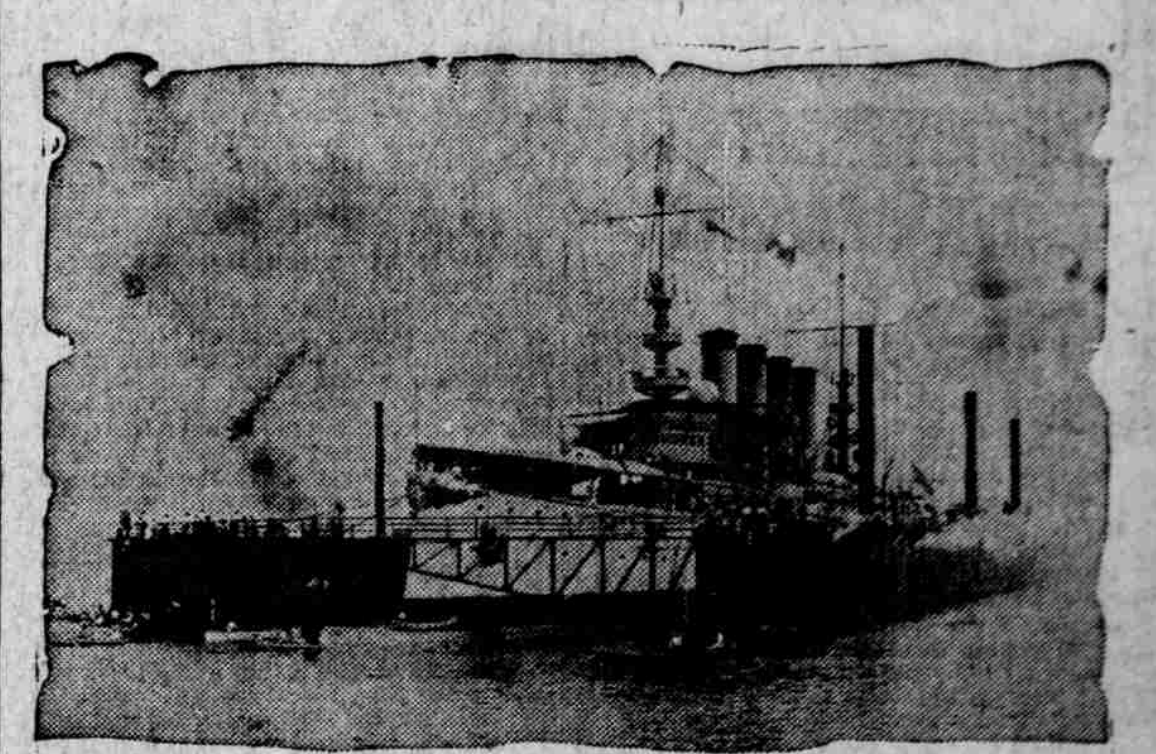

Dr. C. H. Sprague was chosen chairman and Mrs. Sprague, secretary. The committee appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws is composed of Mrs. W. B. Cogswell, Stratford, Wilbur F. Burns, E. L. French, Miss S. Belle Blackstone and John A. L. Julian.

The tone of the remarks of those participating in the discussion was to the effect that the club will be very democratic, the same as the people of that state are, that the membership will not be limited to those actually born there but will include those married to natives of the state and also those who have lived there a number of years and that probably two big meetings a year will be held, one in the summer at some shore resort chiefly for the purpose of promoting sociability among the members and one in the winter to be addressed by prominent New Hampshire men or women. Sociability among people who still cherish a great love for the state of their birth will be the keynote of the organization, all bearing in mind that while New Hampshire is at these and similar has produced some big men.

Paris recently erected a monument to the memory of Dr. Horace Wells, the American dentist who was a pioneer in the use of nitrous oxide gas.

The Austrian government has set the price on the output of its radium laboratory at 400 crowns a milligram, or at the rate of $56,500,000 a pound.

VISITING NURSES

ASSOCIATION ASKS GREATER SUPPORT

Demand Upon the Resources of Organization Growing Faster Than its Means

The members of the Visiting Nurse Association are well pleased with the mass meeting held at the City Hall a few weeks ago, because of the work which the members are doing for the sick poor of the city was brought forcibly to the public mind. The members of the association desire to express their appreciation through the Farmer to Mayor Buckingham, who gave them the use of the City Hall chamber for the meeting, and desire also to thank those who responded to their appeals for aid.

As the association becomes better known to the poorer-people of the city, there more sickness prevalent, and more so in this city than in any other city of the State. The winter months are noted for the many cases of coughs and colds, but it is the spring days when weather conditions are so changeable that serious sicknesses are most common. Each week the visiting nurses, assisted by nurses who occasionally give their spare time to the association, report new cases that need attention. At the most the visiting nurse does what she can in each case she is called in to attend, but it is almost an impossibility to give each case the time that it requires. It has been figured out that the visiting nurse makes about eight or nine visits a day, about an hour to each visit. It is for this reason that enough ground cannot be covered by one nurse that the association is especially desirous of adding another nurse. Another nurse is an impossibility unless the funds of the association are in such a way to maintain one.

Me Schorts of the Henry Street Settlement in New York who spoke at the mass meeting, told of the various ways in which the nurses are maintained by the people of the metropolis; that a number of the charitable societies pay the salary of a nurse; then again clubs give musicals and theatricals, in this way maintaining a nurse for a year or less. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in New York pays the salaries of seven nurses who are under the direction of the Visiting Nurses' Association. It is not impossible for a number of our social or charitable organizations in this way, or even some public spirited citizen, to provide for a nurse for even a few months of the year at least. It is a possibility and is being done with great success in other cities.

STRANGE MOTHER

"Kiss me good-bye, mamma, just once," pleaded little Emil Potts, aged 14, when the court officers were preparing to lead him from the prisoners' pen of the city court back into a cell today, after Judge Foster had ordered him committed to the State Reformatory school in Meriden until he is 21 years old.

The mother turned away without a tear, and winked to the bystanders, belittling the youngster's plea.

The child broke from the court officers' grasp and flung himself upon his mother's bosom, sobbing as if his little heart would break. Still the mother showed no sympathy, and impatiently she tore the embracing arms of her child from her neck and pushed him away.

"I want to go home with papa and you," sobbed the child, tears streaming down his cheeks in evidence of belated penitence for his wrong doing.

"It's a good thing for her Judge Foster is not around," said one of the court officials, who knew of the court's strongly defined notions of maternal duties.

Mrs. Potts swept out of the court room paying no further heed to the cries of the little convict, refusing him even a farewell kiss.

The lad was brought to police headquarters last night as an incorrigible. His mother testified without emotion that he had lost 15 jobs during the year. She said the child was too fresh.

King Christian's Odd Find.

King Christian of Denmark, while stopping at his hunting lodge in the forest chanced to see a queer white house on the road to Copenhagen, upon inquiry he learned that the house had been built by some enterprising American physician and contained baths which were said to work wonders.

It was like the King to do as he pleased. In this instance he visited the small white house and explored it thoroughly, then he took one of the wonder looking baths, so greatly was he delighted with the bath and its effects that he took similar one repeatedly until his aches and pains were in a fair way of losing themselves in the old forest. Then he produced his fair daughter, Queen Alexandra of England to test the life giving Turkish baths, so my good reader be wise like King Christian and go to the Hotel Atlas Turkish Baths, Fairfield avenue, near Broad street, and lose your aches and pains at any hour for the Atlas baths are never closed.
